Archivo Hispalense magazine

Centennial publication whose collaborations range from literary and historical to artistic topics, with no further limitations than the geographical framework limited of the ancient Kingdom of Seville.

In the long life of the magazine, two stages must be considered: in the first period, which spans from 1886 to 1888, four volumes were published. However, its editions were interrupted until 1943, when its publication was resumed, and since then it has been linked to a public institution, the Provincial Council of Seville.
